

Abstract

A system is described in which a first set of web pages is available for an administrator who is unskilled in constructing HTML web pages. The administrator can input data to create input parameters. The input parameters are used for the construction of web pages for users. The users then input user data which furthers a business process.